

Before a learning or attention diagnosis, rule out vision

Eye strain during reading can look like inattention, avoidance or a reading problem. Checking vision gives your child's evaluation one more piece of objective information.

Check anything you've noticed

- |                                                                              |                                                                         |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| <input type="checkbox"/> Attention drops mostly during reading or close work | <input type="checkbox"/> Listens and reasons much better than they read |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Headaches or tired eyes with schoolwork             | <input type="checkbox"/> Rereads, skips lines or loses their place      |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Homework takes far longer than it should            | <input type="checkbox"/> Much worse at the end of the day               |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Covers an eye, tilts head or holds work close       | <input type="checkbox"/> Avoids reading, puzzles or detailed work       |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Worry or dread before homework                      | <input type="checkbox"/> Never had a functional vision evaluation       |

Checked two or more?

A functional vision evaluation measures eye teaming, focusing, tracking and visual processing. With your permission, the results go to your psychologist for the full picture.

Book an evaluation
visionlearncenter.com
(561) 462-1245

A vision finding doesn't replace any other diagnosis; many children have both. See a doctor today for sudden double vision or a new eye turn.

---

Referral to Vision & Learning Center

CUT HERE AND BRING TO YOUR VISIT

Child's name

Date of birth

Referring psychologist

Practice and phone

Reason: ☐ ADHD / LD evaluation ☐ Visual processing ☐ Attention with near work ☐ Results needed by: _____

Offices across South Florida · Florida FES-UA scholarship accepted